THE NEW HAVEN SUIT

Railroad's Contention Supported—
Not a "Slight Pretext."

The government's suit for a dissolution or disintegration of the New Haven railroad system was ordered because, President Wilson said, the company's directors, upon a "slight pretext," had failed to carry out a dissolution agreement so far as it related to the company's Boston and Maine shares. It should be borne in mind that the directors, represented in the negotiations with the government by Chairman Howard Elliott and Dr. Hadley, the president of Yale university, proposed to abide by all the remaining parts of the agreement and offered to meet the difficulty presented by new legislation affecting the marketable value of these shares by a disposal of them temporarily that all the requirements of the Sherman act would be satisfied.

We are unable to agree with Mr. Wilson and the attorney-general in regarding the difficulty in question as a "slight pretext." It seems to us that Dr. Hadley and his associates were not guilty of bad faith, but were honorably and reasonably serving the interests of the stockholders. We regret that their offer was not accepted, and that this suit, which will drag along for two or three years, was begun.

But it is unfortunate that the suit should have been caused by, and should be based upon, the acquisition of the Boston and Maine, which, in our judgment, did not involve such a suppression of competition as should warrant prosecution under the Sherman act. The Boston and Maine and the New Haven were not competing roads or systems, except perhaps with respect to a very small part of their traffic, in a narrow strip of territory where the two systems were in contact with each other. It can be shown that existing competition was by no means suppressed, and that the public suffered no injury, by the acquisition of a considerable number of the urban and interurban trolley lines.

In a certain sense, the prosecution has been misdirected. There are crimes for which severe punishment should be inflicted, but few, if any, of them have been violations of the Sherman act. Forcible disintegration of the system, if the courts shall order this, may not serve the public interest, but we shall be glad to see punishment for those who are guilty of something worse than maladministration.—The Independent.

More Beyond.

On very ancient Spanish coins there is a picture of the strait of Gibraltar and beneath the Latin words "Ne plus ultra" (there is nothing beyond).

In the days when these coins were made that was the belief of the then known world—there was nothing beyond the strait but a wide waste of western sea.

Then came Columbus, who sailed away over the waste of waters to discover a new world, and on the newer coins the "ne" was omitted, leaving only "plus ultra" (more beyond).

Her Only Word.

"Well," he said after he had kissed her, "you are silent. Have you nothing to say?"
There was no response.
"Are you angry?"
She did not answer.
"Do you think me a brute?"
She remained silent.
"Are you ever going to let me see you again?"
She made no reply.
"For heaven's sake, speak to me. Say one word at least!"
"More."—Chicago Record-Herald.

REAPING BENEFIT

From the Experience of Bennington People

We are fortunate in deed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utilities of Bennington residents on the following subject will interest and benefit many of our readers. Read this statement. No better proof can be had.

Henry Pulver, 172 Beech St., Bennington, says: "I worked hard and was on my feet constantly and as the result, my kidneys became disordered. My back was lame and sore and I had headaches and dizzy spells. The kidney secretions caused me annoyance. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a supply at Cole's Drug Store. I noticed improvement from the first and after I had used two boxes, the backache left and the kidneys became normal. You may continue to publish my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. Kidney complaint has never returned since I was cured."

MUSICAL HEADS AND FACES.

They Have a Shape All Their Own, Says a German Scientist.

That all musicians are "freaks," so far as their physical appearance goes, is the opinion of Dr. Paul Sohn, the German scientist. Not only this, but he finds that, regardless of their race or nationality, all persons of marked musical ability show a close resemblance to one another in the shape of their heads and faces. The head and countenance of the typical musician often look very much like those of the lion or the sphinx.

The peculiar shape of a musician's head is due, Dr. Sohn believes, to the gradual expansion of the sound center of his brain and the consequent change in the conformation of his skull. This is why the heads of Wagner, Beethoven, Robert Schumann, Richard Strauss and other great musicians all have an eccentric, abnormal and sometimes fantastic appearance. A musician's sound center develops abnormally because it is there that everything in his life finds its motive.

The musical head and face are of a primitive type, because musical genius is a reversion to the time when man communicated his ideas by means of more or less inarticulate sounds. But, although the musician's physical appearance is barbarous in its lack of beauty and regularity, it contains no hint of degeneracy.

The typical musical head is characterized by the horizontal breadth of the forehead, the broad nose and chin and the wide, extremely mobile mouth. The brow often overhangs greatly, as was so notably the case with Beethoven. The eyes are lustrous, but bear a separated, dreamy expression. The hands are broad and strong.

"Musicians," says Dr. Sohn, "are absolute slaves to their sense of sound, and it is this that not only affects their physical appearance, but makes them mentally so nervous and excitable. The main feature of the musical intellect is that mental excitement seeks a different outlet from that in the case of ordinary men."—New York American.

An Unrepresentative House.

One of the most elaborate calculations of the composition of the house of commons a hundred years ago is given in Dr. Oldfield's "Representative History." According to this, 218 members were returned by 87 peers in England and Wales, 21 members by 21 peers in Scotland and 51 members by 30 peers in Ireland. Thus just 300 members were returned by peers. In addition 137 members were returned by 90 commoners in England and Wales, 14 members by 14 commoners in Scotland and 20 members by 19 commoners in Ireland, while the treasury commanded 11 seats, the admiralty 4 and the ordnance 1. Consequently in a house of 638 members 171 could claim to be more or less independent.—London Chronicle.

STRUCK FROM THE ROLLS.

What Happens to an English Lawyer When He Goes Wrong.

When a solicitor passes his examinations his name is entered on the "rolls" of the legal profession. Should he ever become guilty of professional misconduct his name is "struck off the rolls."

It is a grave matter. Any person having a complaint against a solicitor in reference to his professional conduct is supposed to forward it to the Incorporated Law Society, the body which rules the legal profession. His private life doesn't trouble the society unless he is convicted of a criminal offense.

Having received the complaint and evidence in support of it, the society brings the matter before a divisional court composed of two or three of the most distinguished judges on the bench. The solicitor is given every chance of defending himself, but if, after hearing the evidence, the judges decide that he is guilty his name is "struck from the rolls." Should the offense be a minor one, caused more by misunderstanding than fraud, the solicitor may be suspended for a period and allowed to practice again at the expiration of it.

A solicitor cannot be "struck off the rolls" for negligence or bankruptcy. A client's remedy in the first case is to bring an action against him for damages. Bankruptcy is adjudged to be a misfortune and therefore is not "professional misconduct."—London Tit Bits.
